

THE WELL-WATERED EXECUTIVE

Joshua 15:16-19

The story of Othniel and Achsah in Joshua 15:16–19 provides a profound picture of how Kingdom executives operate under the New Covenant. Caleb promised his daughter Achsah in marriage to whoever conquered the fortress of Kiriath-sepher. Othniel stepped up, overcame the challenge, and won her hand. However, the true masterclass in corporate Kingdom advancement belongs to Achsah. Upon receiving a plot of land from her father, she realized it lacked a vital resource: water. She did not complain, doubt her father's love, or settle for a barren field. Instead, she got off her donkey, approached her father with bold reverence, and made a specific request: "Give me a blessing; since you have given me land in the South, give me also springs of water." Her father immediately granted her request, giving her both the upper and lower springs.

As a modern Kingdom executive, you are not working to earn God's favor or begging for scraps in the marketplace. Under the New Covenant, Jesus Christ has already won the ultimate victory. You are a co-heir with Christ, positioned in heavenly places. The "land" you have been given—your business, your corporate division, or your industry sector—is your assigned territory. Yet, many Christian leaders try to manage their territory using dry, worldly strategies alone. They rely solely on market analytics, human intellect, and exhausting hustle. Like a dry field in the South, a business without spiritual infrastructure eventually burns out. Achsah's shift from the donkey to her father's presence is your daily blueprint. The donkey represents your daily operational grind—the emails, meetings, and spreadsheets. To succeed at the highest level, you must regularly dismount from the grind and enter the presence of your Heavenly Father.

When you approach God under the New Covenant, you come boldly to a throne of grace, not a throne of judgment. You are asking a Father who has already given you the Kingdom. Achsah asked for springs, and she received a double portion—the upper and lower springs. In business, the upper springs represent divine inspiration, supernatural strategy, and prophetic insight. This is the innovation that market research cannot predict. The lower springs represent the practical, earthly resources: cash flow, top-tier talent, favorable regulations, and strategic partnerships. When you align your corporate goals with Kingdom purposes, God opens both dimensions of supply. Your market positioning shifts from competitive survival to divine dominion. You begin to see solutions where competitors see dead ends. Your leadership becomes refreshing, sustaining everyone within your corporate ecosystem. Do not settle for dry ground this year. Dismount from the grind, present your specific corporate needs to the Father, and claim the double portion of resources required to rule your market sector.

 Practical Outcomes

Audit Your Assets: Identify the "dry areas" in your business cash flow, team morale, or product development.

Dismount Daily: Schedule 15 minutes of uninterrupted silence before your workday begins to receive upper-level strategies.

Upgrade Your Ask: Write down three specific, bold resource requests needed for your business scaling and present them to God in prayer
